The time to look for new global cooperation against COVID-19.

COVID-19 is sweeping across the world. At the end of February 2020, more than 83,000 have been infected and nearly 3,000 dead all over the globe. This epidemic led many countries to close their doors to foreign entrances. All countries mutually blame each other for this worldwide infections without scientific evidence. The world seems to go back to pre-global times when each state was isolated within its national boundary. It is an unexpected obstacle to all human activities such as security, trade, investment, and cultural exchanges. However, this new crisis should be overcome through new global cooperation rather than imputation.

Volume 6, Number 1 of China and WTO Review contains creative and provocative papers with a wide range of aspects. The <Articles> section covers four comprehensive topics, which analyze the Chinese Position as a Global Player at the time of 4IR; China's Silk Road Union from a legal and policy perspective; Transnational Surrogacy cases in China under Private International Law, and China's SOEs within a Redefined Competition Policy. The <Current Development> section examines The 1907 Hague Peace Conference as China's Initial Steps towards the 'International Society'; China's Role in Developing the WTO Dispute Settlement Rules; and China's Narcotic Drug Trafficking Policy under Public International Law and WTO Law. Professor Stuart Malawer addresses a very positive essay based on practical experience with President Donald Trump's ruthless litigation abuses. Charles Ho Wang Mak reviews China's International Investment Strategy: Bilateral, Regional, and Global Law and Policy (Julien Chaisse ed.). We extend our deepest appreciations to the authors and contributions.

China and WTO Review is published semi-annually. Submissions will be accepted on a rolling basis. CWR is an internationally refereed scholarly journal; each volume thus undergoes a vigorous peer review selection process. Authors are strongly required to follow the Ethical Rules of the Review, but all responsibilities for potential research ethics violations shall be assumed by the authors themselves. Drafts containing provocative, timely and creative legal and policy ideas on China and WTO-related issues will be preferred. More details may be found at: http://cwr.yiil.org.
